

CEFR (Common European Framework of Reference for Languages)

- The Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR) is a global standard for measuring English skills.
- This module builds English skills at the A1 level using the CEFR. It includes simple phrases to track progress and improve communication.
- The CEFR has six levels: from A1 to C2. Each level shows what you can do in speaking, reading, listening, and writing.

CEFR Levels

- A1 (Elementary): You can use everyday words and short phrases. You can introduce yourself and ask simple questions if people speak slowly.
- A2 (Pre-Intermediate): You can talk about daily life, like family or work. You can join short and simple conversations.
- B1 (Intermediate): You can manage basic situations while traveling or studying. You can describe your experiences and write short texts.
- B2 (Upper-Intermediate): You can understand the main ideas in readings. You can explain your thoughts clearly and take part in longer conversations.
- C1 (Advanced): You can speak fluently and understand long and difficult texts. You can use English well in school, work, or social life.
- C2 (Proficient): You understand almost everything you hear or read. You can speak and write naturally, even on complex topics.
